ROOSEVELT ADMITS CONSULTING "BOSS"

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Syracuse, April 27.—Badgered into fretfulness by the tenacious cross examination of W. L. Barnum, of counsel for William Barnes, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today admitted that he did not accept the Republican nomination for vice-president of the U. S. in 1900 until he consulted with T. C. Platt, "The boss."

He gave other testimony in the famous $50,000 libel suit to the effect that he considered Platt the boss while he was governor of New York and consulted him about all appointments and such matters.

It was the comment of spectators that the colonel appeared to be "up a tree" and not yet "out of the woods."

Syracuse, April 27.—Treated "Like an ordinary witness," Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was not a happy man today when he resumed the witness stand to hear H. L. Barnum of William Barnes' counsel read more Platt letters in which Roosevelt acknowledged the late U. S. senator as Republican boss of the Empire state. Bereft of the privilege of amplifying his answers into speeches gagged, muzzled and bound down to "yes" and "no" answers by the insistent and implacable Barnum, the colonel saw no fun in the proceedings. He fretted visibly.

The reading of letters and cross-examination of Roosevelt on them was expected to consume the day.

The Barnes people were jubilant today over the colonel's admission that he consulted Platt as the boss and that he appointed a Democrat to office at the request of Senator Grady, when Platt wrote him it was "a good thing to please Grady."

On the other hand, the Roosevelt adherents point out that Platt's advice to Roosevelt to "please Grady" goes a long way to prove Roosevelt's assertion on July 22, 1914, that the Barnes Republicans and Murphy Democrats combined to control the senate. This is one point upon which the $50,000 libel suit is based.

It was believed today that the testimony of Colonel Roosevelt, the rest of the coss-examination the re-direct and re-cross might consume the balance of the week.

There could be no doubt that the colonel was nettled yesterday. Several times he showed irritation and snapped out his answers. The smile was there a part of the time, but it was a mechanical one. The eyes did not smile.

The ultimate effect of Roosevelt's testimony that he "consulted Platt as the boss" and showed him the first drafts of his messages to the legislature and appointed Democrats at his behest, is a matter of speculation among politicians.

"Mr. Roosevelt told nothing yesterday that was new" said an Onondaga county politician today. "We knew all that he admitted. We knew Platt was the man who pulled the strings. But Mr. Roosevelt has put the matter in concrete form. It is published and can be seized upon by politicians. There is no telling what its effects will be."

Even the reading of letters does not discourage the gallery of women who have followed the trial from its start.

"I can make neither head nor tail of it" laughed one young woman this morning as she struggled her way to the court room, "but all the same it's lots of fun."

All Syracuse seems to echo her sentiment. The crowd grows rather than diminishes with each day.

Colonel Roosevelt's consultation with the late Senator Thomas C. Platt regarding the Republican vice presidential nomination in 1900 was the basis of cross-examination when Justice William S. Andrews reconvened court at 10:02 o'clock. Mr. Barnum cross-questioned the colonel at length on the contents of a letter read the last thing yesterday afternoon. In that letter Mr. Roosevelt told Platt he did not care to be vice president. He wanted to run again for governor of New York but told Platt he would abide by his advice.

"Did you accept Mr. Platt's advice in reference to the vice presidential nomination?" asked Mr. Barnum.

"I did not," said the colonel.

"Did you consult him on the matter as a boss?"

"I did not?"

"Your relations with Boss Platt were most friendly at that time?" queried Mr. Barnum.

"Most friendly," affirmed the colonel.

"In your letter you said you had thoroughly enjoyed your term as Governor," said Barnum. "Did you enjoy your term?"

"Most thoroughly," said Roosevelt with a laugh.

"Did Mr. Platt advise you to run for vice president?" asked Barnum.

"Please reshape the question," requested Roosevelt.

John M. Bowers, Roosevelt's chief counsel, objected to the question and it was stricken out.

Mr. Barnum then read a letter from Senator Platt to Roosevelt referring to the New York charter commission and the canal investigation commission. The latter referred to the appointment of the charter commission.

"Did Mr. Platt suggest any names for the charter commission?" asked Barnum.

"I think not," said the colonel slowly. "Yes, Mr. Platt suggested the name of Mr. DeWitt, but his name had previously been mentioned to me."

"Did you consult with Mr. Platt about the canal commission?"

"I did."

"What was said?"

"I cannot remember exactly."

"What was the Fox-McFarland report?" asked Barnum.

"I do not remember."

"Was it a report of a canal investigation?"

"Yes, I believe it was," admitted the witness.

"Did you take any steps to carry out the recommendations of that report?"

"I laid it before the legislature" said the colonel.

"Move to strike out" said Barnum.

"Stricken out" said Justice Andrews.

The subject was dropped.

Mr. Barnum then read the following letter of February 9, 1900 from Platt to Roosevelt referring to the vice-presidency:

"I have hardly had time to give the consideration it deserves to your letter of February 1 and the matters involved therein and am inclined to take more time for mature deliberation. The vice-presidential question is a very important one and a great deal depends upon it.

"Mrs. Platt's condition is considerably improved and it looks now as though I should be able to get to New York soon, at which time we can personally discuss the vice-presidential and other questions."

'Did you consult Mr. Platt about accepting the Republican nomination for vice-president?" asked Barnum.

"I did" said Roosevelt.

"Did you value that advice?"

"I cannot answer that yes or no" smilingly said the colonel.

The matter was dropped without the testimony disclosing what Platt's advice was on the vice-presidency.

The next letter also dealt with the vice-presidency. It was from Roosevelt to Platt on February 7. It follows:

"Your very kind note has just been received. I note that you expect to be in New York on Saturday. If so, I shall not try to lunch with you, but if convenient I will call on you at the Fifth avenue hotel at 3 p. m. Will you wire me on receipt of this note?

"P. S. I saw Kerens and told him I had written to you that I would not take the vice-presidency, but that I wanted nothing said until I had a chance to talk matters over with you. The more I have thought it over, the more I have felt that I would a great deal rather be anything, say professor of history, than vice-president."

"Who was Kerens?" asked Mr. Barnum.

"Richard C. Kerens of St. Louis" said the colonel.

"Was he a boss?"

"I do not know."

Barnum then read a letter of February 17 from Roosevelt to Platt, referring to the Barren Island legislation. It follows in part:

Roosevelt to Platt February 17, 1900:

"You will doubtless remember that last year I endeavored in every way to get a proper Barren Island bill passed through both houses of the legislature. Unfortunately a bill that was conservative and right, did not reach me for executive action. This year, however, we have two bills which are eminently conservative and proper. They are recomended by Mr. Dady and I think he has communicated with you on the subject". Tammany, however, under the leadership of Senator Grady is endeavoring to defeat these measure in the senate and I think they are bills which the organization could very properly take hold of and which ought to pass for the benefit of the people adjacent to Barren Island".

"Who is the Dady referred to?" asked Barnum.

"Michael Dady, a Democrat of Brooklyn" was the answer.

Platt's reply to the Barren Island letter was read in part as follows:

"Platt to Roosevelt, February 28, 1900.

"I am in receipt of yours of the 27th relating to the Barren question. You will remember that I was the one who was most importunate with you on the question of abating the nuisance and was very fearful that if we delayed we might encounter just what we have known, united opposition on the part of the Democrats. The truth of it is that the men who are receiving benefits from the Barren Island business are high schemers of Tammany Hall and will do everything in their power to continue their official existence. Perhaps it is no wonder that our friend Judge Cohen is in the forefront as he was before advocating retention.

"Dady had brought this to my attention some days ago and I had already communicated with Senator Ellsworth who Dr. Doty informed me had gone all wrong on the subject and was aiding Tammany Hall in their endeavors. I hope you will see Odell. I will telegraph him at once and urge him to line up the Republican forces unitedly in favor of Dr. Doty's bill, if you can find that any farther endeavor are necessary on my part I shall be only too glad to carry out any advice or suggestion in this behalf".

"Did you see Odell?" asked Barnum.

" I did".

The following then were related:

Roosevelt to Pratt, April 16, 1900

"With reference to the enclosed clipping (which I suppose is entirely unauthorized, ,I venture to recall to you Wilson or Shea. I have just received your letter enclosing communication from Verplanck Colvin. I shall go over that Adirondack survey map."

Platt to Roosevelt, May 5, 1900. (Telegram).

"Our friends of New York Central are very anxious to have you sign senate bill 763, excepting from the franchise tax grade crossings of steam railroads. I hope you can consistently do so. Senator Depew is very anxious."

The following letter from Roosevelt to Platt of May 7, 1900, came next:

"I received your telegram and one from Ford yesterday. It was too late for me to act as I had already established a memorandum stating not merely that Ford was against the bill but that the state tax commissioners opposed the bill.

"I did not receive your telegram until yesterday (Sunday). It was then too late to get at the commission and again go over the matter with them. I am exceedingly sorry if any hardship has been caused either to the New York Central or Long Island R. R. but it was a matter where I really had to act according to the advice of the commission, unless it could be shown that they were in wrong."

A letter from Roosevelt to Platt about the appointments of C. C. Shayne and George Cabot Ward said:

"I am glad you took care of my old friends" he wrote on December 8, 1905.

"Were you not then president of the U. S.?" asked Barnum.

"I was."

"And you still consulted Mr. Platt?"

"I did."

"And in all this voluminous correspondence I have just read the name of William Barnes does not once appear, does it?" asked Barnum.

"It does not snapped the colonel.

The reading of the Platt letters was finished and William Mills Ivins resumed the cross-examination.

"When you sought the advice of Senator Platt, were you acting in the interest of righteousness, efficiency, honesty and integrity?" demanded Mr. Ivins with his bland smile and the colonel looked delighted to get out of the clutches of the relentless and the matter-of-fact Barnum.

"I was" declared the witness.

Mr. Ivins then reverted to Mr. Roosevelt's autobiography. He referred to a passage relating to the Platt-Roosevelt letters about Joseph Murray.

"Did you know the truth of what is there?" asked Ivins.

The court sustained Bowers' objection.

"You may read from the autobiography but not ask about its truth" said Justice Andrews.

"At the time" asked Ivins, "that you wrote these letters about Murray, were you alive—"

A chuckle from the colonel and a titter all over the room interrupted the question.

"Were you alive?" resumed Mr. Ivins, "to the social and industrial conditions in New York?"

"I was" replied the witness.

Mr. Ivins then went back to the Roosevelt-Barnes correspondence read yesterday in which Roosevelt on November 4, 1908 congratulated Barnes on his "manly act in making Hughes's nomination unanimous."

Mr. Roosevelt could not remember whether the letter was written a day before or a day after the 1908 election of Taft and Hughes.

Th cross-examination of Colonel Roosevelt during the reading of the lettes was very brief.

Next came a letter from Lemuel E. Quigg to Platt, May 14, 1900 in part as follows:

"I have been thinking over your statement that Gov. Roosevelt told you that the president had suggested to him that he go on the committee on resolutions at Philadelphia. I repeat what I said to you, that I

MISS ALICE SWANSON.

PLACES HER TRUE LOVE ABOVE THE LAW.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 27.—Admitting that her love for Benjamin H. Loveless, scion of a wealthy family in Wheaton, Ill, a suburb of Chicago, was so great that it had defied law and convention, Miss Alice Swanson, arrested on telegraph orders from the authorities of Rockford, Ill., appeared in court with her two year old son and listened to arguments that finally earned her release on a habeas corpus writ. Simultaneously the police of San Francisco had placed Loveless under arrest there. It was the climax to the disappearance of Loveless 15 years ago, when in connection with a civil service scandal he departed for the west, leaving his wife and two children.

"The love of a good woman supersedes all human made law, all the canons of churches, and all conventions" said Miss Swan. "I have a better right to bear his name than the woman in Chicago who refused to accompany him west for fear she would contract tuberculosis. I met him in a hospital in Denver where I too was suffering from a tubercular affection in one of my feet."

ALLIES FIGHTING TURKS ON LAND

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, April 27.—Fierce fighting is in progress between Turkish troops and the allies' forces landed on Gallipoli peninsula for the Dardanelles campaign, according to a dispatch received from Athens today. It states that the city of Enos, north of the Gulf of Saros, has been made the main base of the allies, the Turkish garrison there retired to the interior without firing a shot after the commander of the Anglo-French fleet had sent notice that the fleet would bombard the town.

The inhabitants were given twenty-four hours to leave.

The bombadment opened Sunday morning, but ceased shortly as no reply was made by the Turks. Air scouts in hydroplanes made a reconnaissance and reported that the Turks had withdrawn to Ipsala.

A dispatch from Salonika states that the Anglo-French forces landed on Gallipoli peninsula number 300,000 men, most of them veterans from the western theater of war whose places in France have been taken by new troops. The British war office today refused to confirm this statement but the government censor permitted its transmission.

Correspondents at Mityline and Chios, in the Aegean, report that the allied fleet is pouring a rain of shells upon the Dardanelles forts. Twenty-two of the most powerful warships in the British and French navies are said to be co-operating in the bombardment.

Under cover of this terrific fire, mine-sweepers have entered the straits, the correspondents say and are removing the mines placed there by the Turks in the month's interval between the last general attack and the present one.

In their land operations against the Dardanelles forts the allies are opposed by Turkish armies commanded by German generals and officered by Germans. One is the first army commanded by Field Marshal von Der Goltz, the other the Dardanelles army led by Gen Limon von Sanders. On the Gallipoli peninsula alone, according to recent reports from Constantinople, 300,000 Turkish troops have been assembled.

It is probable that the allies will find their advance opposed by half a million well trained and well-equipped men. These are troops of the first line, whose military trainig has been going on under German direction for many years.

Many German officers are reported to have arrived at Constantinople recently.

For many months the Turkish fortifications along Gallipoli peninsula have been strengthened. It is said that 500 miles of trenches have been dug.

"Along our front the enemy's artillery has shown activity. Our artillery replied with success and by a strong fire proved useful help to the French who made an attack on Lizerne. This town had fallen into the hands of the enemy Sunday but it was wrested from them again Monday afternoon."

RIBBON OF DEATH.

Rejected Suitor Asked Girl to Pull It and She Did.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Bridgeport, Conn., April 27.—Emily Wheeler, debutante and daughter of a wealthy Bridgeport banker, is prostrated today, because she unwittingly sent to his death the man who loved her and who had been engaged to her. Arthur Hearn Cowl, 22 years old, grandson and heir of the late multi-millionaire, George A. Hearn, is the dead youth.

After a brief conference the girl had returned the engagement ring to the youth. He quietly accepted the breaking of the engagement and smiling asked the girl to pull a ribbon that hung from the breast pocket of his coat.

"What will happen then?" asked Miss Wheeler.

"Pull it and see," said the quietly smiling Cowl.

"It is a surprise I have for you."

Playfully the girl did as he asked. A moment later she reeled back in horror as the crack of a pistol sounded from beneath his coat and the youth sank to the ground with a moan. An hour later he died. It is supposed that he concealed the weapon under his coat and possibly pointed it with one hand while smilingly handing the girl the ribbon with the other.

SEVEN KILLED AT KENSICO DAM

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

White Plains, N. Y. April 27—Seven men were killed and 11 others injured when a dozen sticks of dynamite were prematurely discharged in the cut-off trench at the eastern end of the new Kensico dam at Valhalla today.

The explosion occurred 100 feet below the surface and few people in Valhalla knew that an accident had happened until the families of the workmen began flocking to the scene.

About 20 men were working in the hole and the sticks of dynamite had been set and wired, when suddenly without warning, the explosion occurred. Two of those killed were blown 20 feet under a pile of rocks and mangled almost beyond recognition. The injured were working in another part of the excavation and thus escaped the full force of the explosion.

All of the dead are Italians.

The trench was being excavated for the extension of the base of the new dam which when completed will cost over $10,000,000.

FOREST FIRES NEAR GLENS FALLS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Glens Falls, N. Y., April 27.—Fire in the Riverside bottling works at Riverside late yesterday afternoon which spread to Mount Carpenter last night, carried by the high wind across the Hudson river today had spread over 150 acres and is still burning fiercely on the mountain. Every available man is out fighting the flames under the direction of Herbert Stanley, proprietor of the inn at Riverside. With the help of the fire departments of North Creek and Chester, they have succeeded in keeping the fire from fifty cottages on the famous Methodist camp meeting grounds.

The conservation commission has been asked for help. The entire bottling works, including barn, garage, factory and several smaller buildings have been totally destroyed with a loss of $50,000.

Early this morning, the fire fighters succeeded after a desperate all night battle, in keeping the flames from reaching the Standard Oil Company's plant. The fire has branched out into the forests of the mountain in several different directions, threatening with destruction a large tract of forest lands and at 11 a. m. was still burning fiercely.

CUT ROBBER'S THROAT.

Aged Man Lured to a Hotel Killed the Thief.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Danbury, Conn., April 27.—Lured to a hotel by two strangers who claimed that they had met him in Bridgeport and other cities, Joseph B. Hill, 78 years old and one of the wealthiest residents of Redding, early today killed an intruder in his room.

The old man was suspicious of the place and went to bed with an open knife under his pillow. He secured this when a burglar entered his room and during the battle that followed cut his antagonist's throat. The dead man was one of the two who had taken him to the hotel.

Hill had collected a large sum of money yesterday. The strangers met him and the trio were together until late at night. The strangers suggested going to a hotel and on arriving there, three rooms were assigned to them, the strangers occupying one on each side of their victim. Hill bid his money but he was fearful of a trap and lay awake until one of the men entered the room. The fatal fight then started. The third man escaped.

GLASCO.

Glasco, April 26.—Master Grant Weeks had a birthday party on Wednesday last. It was one of those pleasant little home affairs, that brighten the days of a happy childhood, and render more lasting and sacred the relationships of the family circle. To cater to the appetite of a growing boy, and reach his heart through his stomach, requires a list of dainties that are seldom in evidence in his daily menu, and that only a fond mother knows how to provide. These had been prepared and set aside with the ice cream, in the lobby near the outside door. Later in the evening when refreshments were in order, and Grant's eyes began to sparkle, and his mouth to water, those who served as waitresses stepped outside to dish up the good things. Just then from the depths of the storm shed came a startling voice, "For goodness sake, what do you know about this." Everything had been swept away by the ruthless hands of some unknown miscreants. The cream had been dug out with dirty hands and nothing remained for the guests. Grant consoled himself by telling his mother that she reminded him of,

Old Mother Hubbard, who went to the cupboard,
To get her poor dog a bone,
But when she came there, the cupboard was bare
And so the poor dog had none.

E. Church in this village on Thursday evening the 29th inst., These views will be explained as they are thrown upon the screen, so that it will be an instructive as well as interesting enertainment. Refreshments will be served by the ladies of the church at the close of the war scenes. Admission 10 cents.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1170—A Becoming Blouse Dress. Girls' Dress With Separate Skirt, and With Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths.

For this smart little dress one could use serge in blue, brown or green, with a finish of rows of soutache braid in white or black, or braid binding in black or self color. The model is also good for plaid and checked suitings, for velvet, or corduroy, and will look well in combinations of silk and cloth. For wash materials it is also desirable. The blouse has vest portions to which the collar is joined. The sleeve in wrist length is new, but the short length sleeve is equally popular. The skirt is a two piece model. The patern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. It requires 3¼ yards of 44 inch material for an 8 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

PARISIAN CREATION.

Handsome Evening Frock Built of Ivory Liberty and Net.

SIMULATING THE GRECIAN.

The gown shown here is Grecian in its simplicity of lines, but wholly twentieth century in the sumptuousness of its fabric. Ivory liberty is draped to form girdle and tunic, while the bodice and overdrapery are of wonderfully colored sequins. A lace underskirt shows where the gown is draped up in the front.

QUAINT PARASOLS.

Ancient Fashions Are Revived In the New Sunshades.

The quaint styles of parasols used from 1820 to 1830 have again appeared. Shirrings, puffings, pipings, cordings and knife plaitings are used in a variety of ways, to emphasize ribs, to outline gores and to form borders. Many odd shapes and rich color combinations are seen. Plain, severe styles, the most prominent being the sand tones, are seen only with tailored dresses. There is a tendency to combine materials. In dressy, fancy models the sand tones are combined with bright colors. For instance, in one model of brilliant red there is a border and a piping between the shirred gores in a rich sand color verging on gold.

A smart parasol developed in contrasting colors has a row of shirring between the gores, producing a leaflike effect. A very pretty parasol has a border of sheer crape in a contrasting color, looped in each section and caught with a flat button effect. Battleship gray is a favorite color, being used alone in tailored designs and in combination with the new reds and blues in elaborate designs.

Many striking shapes are seen. Among these is one with wide gores of richly colored material and narrow portions in stripes or checks. A cluster of shirring appears at the edge. Of special interest is the return of flat Japanese and Chinese effects, both plain and richly embroidered. Japanese prints are in both silk and cotton. Many Japanese designs have dark borders, with here and there a delicate bit of hand embroidery in gold. Sometimes odd looking velvet birds in orange and blue tones are appliqued over the inside surface of the parasol.

POCKETS ARE "IN."

As for pockets, they are "in." Here is a point for all women to consider in connection with the pocket question: Do not be persuaded into permitting them to be placed where they cannot be easily reached.

At present they are boldly placed where every one may see them and are more decorative than practical, but as soon as the polonaise modes really make their presence felt you will miss seeing the pockets. It does not follow they won't be present, for they will be hid, as they were when they were modish before, underneath the polonaise draperies or within the folds of numberless puffs.

For the tailleur of dressy proclivities the pocketed skirt eliminates the possibility of a pocketed coat. And with the plaited skirt, of course, the pockets appear on the coat only.

New vogues for these also introduce braided effects which simulate pockets and this, too, for skirts or suits made of novelty materials.

Free Government.

No free government or the blessing of liberty can be preserved by any people but by a firm adherence to justice, moderation, temperance, frugality and virtue, and by a frequent recurrence to fundamental principles.—Patrick Henry.

HILL ON NEWSPAPERS.

James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway, is one of the three men to whom the business men of America for many years have looked for advice. The other men were the late J. Pierpont Morgan and the late E. H. Harriman. When any of these three said business was good and prospects were better, business men generally adopted their views and let out their sails. When they predicted contrary conditions, sails were taken in or reefed. Now only Mr. Hill remains to speak for the country and business men listen to what he says because his dynamic force is the result of tedious attention to details of business as business affects its natural barometer—the railroad system of the country.

Close attention to business has not prevented Mr. Hill from examining conditions in other lines outside his own specialty of developing the Northwest, and he has expressed his views on "The Publisher and his Public" in an address furnished to the American Newspaper Publisher's Association whose annual banquet in New York city on Thursday night he was unable to attend.

As a bankrupt, he says, the publisher cannot benefit a clientage which he is no longer able to reach, and to pay the cost of publication and a reasonable profit on his investment he must bend to the wishes of his readers. From all time he has been engaged in the most doubtful, elusive and disappointing of all researches—trying to find out what the people want. If that formula could be discovered, the publishing business "would be as simple as the compounding of a patent medicine according to its time-honored recipe." But in trying to find out what the public wants, he learns that there are as many publics as there are varieties of human nature or personal characteristics, who want things that are contradictory and mutually destructive. Each class has its special wants in the newspaper: the sporting page, politics, art, music, books and the tango each have their advocates who grumble that so much space is devoted to other affairs, but most pronounced of all is the conflict where taste is more or less governed by moral principles. The day was when the New York Tribune, or Sun, or Godey's Lady's Book met every want of a certain class, but publications of these types could not remain solvent six months now. The range of demand has widened. The commercial demand for many readers has resulted in the spread of sensationalism, the worst of which is that in pandering to the least worthy element among readers, that element is steadily increased by the food given to it by the education of others in a more or less depraved state.

"A great deal of what is excused as 'giving the public what it wants,'" says Mr. Hill, "is really making the public want what you give To habituate the clean-minded reader to stories of crime, of sexual irregularity, of alleged but unproved wrongdoing in high places, to make him suspect eventually that these things are actually the woof of life and not mere blemishes on the fabric, is much easier than to make the vicious-minded man love righteousness and hate iniquity."

To the outsider, he says, it seems that many of the difficulties and shortcomings of newspapers today rise from the effort to cover too much ground at once, and he believes that application of the principle of specialization, with a very concise summary of all the daily news of the world, dictated solely by absolute accuracy in fact and statement, would work well. Next would come a paper of larger size, more detail and description, containing in addition the less important happenings of the day's life; then for mental beginners something more in the line of what is known as the "sensational" paper but with a closer regard for truth and a higher standard of decency. He believes that such a principle of specialization, so that each reader would get exactly what he wanted, forms an exceedingly interesting, important and attractive future possibility of the publishing business.

Specialization has proved successful in every branch of business and it is possible Mr. Hill is predicting in fact the time when newspapers will specialize along the lines indicated. But it is safe to predict that such newspapers will not come until the public itself becomes more specialized in its tastes and loses interest in the human-interest happenings of the world. Until man becomes such a specialist that he fails to take an interest in his neighbors, in their successes and failings, the specialized newspaper of the kind suggested by Mr. Hill will not last long. Mr. Hill's idea emphasizes this fact. He has specialized in business so long that he knows how to make it successful, but should he specialize to the same extent in studying human nature he would discover that it takes a friendly social interest in affairs outside its own specialty and its own home, even as he himself does, and seeks daily information concerning such affairs in the columns of a newspaper which specializes only in news stated in the same degree of relative importance that the happenings themselves bear to other happenings in every daily life. With Mr. Hill's newspapers, the perspective is the same everywhere; mankind wants scenery which contains not only the plains but mountains and valleys as well. That is what Mr. Hill wants, too.

"LITTLE MOTHERS."

(By Our Woman Editor.)

There is about an equal blend of pity and of admiration for many of the "little mothers," forced through poverty to learn the joys and the sorrows of caring for baby brothers and sisters. Much too young for the responsibilities they carry, through circumstances too strong to be resisted, it is well to be prepared if they must meet them.

And this is what the Little Mothers' League does for these girls, ranging from 12 to 14 years.

Every public school in the city contributes its quota to a membership of about 20,000 girls, the greatest numbers enrolled from the congested districts, and the league is under the health department, which is working to reduce the death rate among infants.

Nurses visit the homes and try to reach the mothers with their trained ministrations in behalf of babies that do not know the meaning of real care; doctors treat them with healing medicines and wholesome advice; and now the workers are training the "little mothers" to keep disease and death from their homes, so far as better sanitary conditions, more suitable food and wiser care can ward off those dread visitors.

In a home where children are more abundant than funds to supply their needs, where the mother often must work on the outside for the few dollars she can earn, the younger ones, even the tiny baby, are left to the care of the girl who chances to be the oldest; and they thrive or sicken, according to her knowledge or her ignorance.

The league sends the young guardians to the dispensaries where pure milk may be found, shows them how to substitute barley water for milk when sickness comes to the babies under their care, teaches them how to keep the little charges as cool and comfortable as may be when the heat grows excessive and how to see that their bottles are clean and sweet.

It points out the danger-signs when a doctor must be called in; tells what to do when the tiny patient is convalescing and prepares the "little mother" for all the work of tiding the baby brother or sister through such ills as may be met in their young lives.

The girls are encouraged to write compositions or playlets whose plots have for their themes babies, babies, babies, their treatment, how to make and keep them well, what to do and what not to do; and while they may not show a marked dramatic skill, they prove that the instruction has not gone wide of its mark.

The characters are sure to include a sick baby and its "little mother;" or perhaps may bring out the teaching that air is not fatal to the puny heroine about whom the interest centers, or it may be all about unwise food, or following a neighbor's advice, or possibly, the young writer may confine her story to pure cleanliness.

We may have our baby hospitals, our retreats for the wee sick ones, sunkissed and wind swept, away from everything that deals with uncleanliness, disease germs and unsanitation; but of what lasting benefit are they if the little ones must go back to the heat and wretchedness of their tenement homes, where the real mothers are work-oppressed and too weary to give them the care they must have or early give up the struggle?

It is here the "little mothers" must step in; and unless trained to better ways, they know nothing wiser than to give their young charges fruit that long since has lost its freshness, perhaps even pickles or cheap candies, in order to quiet the fretful babies under their care.

These young foster mothers are pretty heavily burdened, and one cannot wonder if they fail to drive sickness away. They are eager to learn all that the league is anxious to teach, we are told, and are doing far more to help in the work of saving the babies than might be supposed; but one fancies that now and then a rebellious little girl, in the longing for play, must drop the responsibilities she is expected to carry.

Sick babies come first in the season of hot days, which spell suffering and death for the tiny dwellers in the worst of tenement homes, but the young foster mothers are still well within childhood, in point of years if not of experience, and they, too, are in need of care and of play. They are early pressed into service, and while they are needed adjuncts to the great work, they lose many hours and days and weeks of life as children should know it. They seem far too young for their ready-made burdens, and it is to hope that there are better times ahead for the immature workers.

His Guess.

"You promised that you would give me my answer this evening," he said. "Are you ready to do so?"

"Yes," she replied, "but I want you to promise me something first."

"What it it?"

Unflattering Resemblance.

The Russian army of 8,000,000 men is a prohibition one. Russia, in fact, is now a prohibition country, the Czar having closed all the governmental vodka shops, which yielded a revenue of $450,000,000 a year.

"Prohibition" said Representative Hobson, "is advancing everywhere. Take politics. The politician, even the statesman, was a heavy drinker in the past. How different now!

"A political failure, during his first, last and only term in the house, went into the house barber shop to be shaved one day.

"'Congressman, sah,' said the house barber, 'do you know, sah, you remind me mighty strong, sah, of Daniel Webster?'

"The brow, eh?' chuckled the congressman. 'Is it the brow, George?'

"'No, sah,' the barber answered; 'it aint de brow. It's de breff.'"—Washington Post.

"I am to be married next week," said a young moving picture actor, with an uneasy laugh. "She's a dear girl, but I've been told that December is an unlucky month to marry in."

"My boy," said Mr. Goodwin, "I have tried nearly all the months, and December is no worse than any of the others."—Los Angeles Times.

Edward Golden has been mentioned for the place. Catskill has dropped out of the league and Walden will probably take its place. The following towns will be represented in the league: Kingston, Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, Rhinebeck, Madalin, Hyde Park, Wappingers Falls and Walden. Kingston will be represented by Louis Brown of the Red Monograms; Edward Moakley of the Astors of Rhinebeck; William Hoffman, Madalin; Charles Leonard, Hyde Park; William Phillips, Wappingers; James Graham, Newburgh; Fred Wetmore, Poughkeepsie and Edward Golden of New York.

By the Whatsoever Band.

The Whatsoever Band of the Wurts Street Presbyterian Church will give its annual entertainment in the chapel on Friday evening, April 30, at 7:45 o'clock. During the evening the little girlies will put their dollies to sleep and the dream fairies will float in and out; the friends of "Grandma Day" will have an old fashioned tea party in "Grandma Land;" the program will include several musical numbers and will close with a laughable farce entitled "Curing a Borrower." Ice cream and home made cake and candy will be for sale after the entertainment.

To Whom it May Concern, Greetings:

I, Palmer Canfield, Jr., Mayor of the City of Kingston, N. Y., hereby give NOTICE that a PUBLIC HEARING concerning the bill passed by the legislature of the state of New York, being Senate Bill Printed No. 1421, Int. No. 1184, entitled, "An ACT to amend chapter seven hundred and forty-seven of the laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six," entitled, "An ACT to revise and consolidate the several acts in relation to the City of Kingston, to revise the charter of said city and to establish a city court therein and define its jurisdiction and powers, generally," will be held and afforded before the Mayor and the Common Council of the City of Kingston, N. Y., at the Common Council chamber, in the City Hall in said city, on the 30th day of April, 1915, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., of that day, and all persons may then and there be heard concerning the same.

The bill amends the city charter generally in that it changes the fiscal year, from January first to December thirty-first, inclusive, instead of being from December first to November thirtieth inclusive as it is at the present time, and in that it provides for the payment of school taxes in August of each year instead of at the time of the payment of the general taxes, beginning 1916, and in that it provides for the payment of city taxes other than school taxes in February of each year, and in that it provides for the appointment of a board of public works to consist of four members to be appointed by the mayor and also the mayor, which board will have jurisdiction over the streets, sewers, and parks, public lighting, etc., of the city, and in that it consolidates the present city court and the present recorder's court to take effect January 1st, 1918, and provides for only one court for both civil and criminal jurisdiction to be known as the city court, and provides for the election of the city judge for a term of four years, and the appointment by the city judge of a clerk who shall be a stenographer, and of a person to act as probation officer and marshal, etc., and in that it provides for the election of an alderman-at-large, who is voted for throughout the city, and who presides at the meetings of the common council and who exercises the duties of an alderman except, that he votes only in case of a tie vote, and in that it changes the name of the Alms Board to the Board of Charities, and the name of the Alms House to City Home, and in that it changes and amends other provisions and sections of the present city charter.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the City of Kingston, N. Y., to be affixed this 26th day of April, 1915. (City Seal)

Sessions Will be Held in First Presbyterian Church.

The twenty-third annual Christian Endeavor convention for Ulster county will be held on May 24 and 25 in the First Presbyterian Church of Elmendorf street, and the indications are that it will be one of the most successful ever held in the county. The program as arranged covers all branches of the work, it being the plan to have conferences, question boxes, and addresses so that all interested will be able to receive help on any question or line now being carried on.

Prominent Christian Endeavor workers will be present and take part in the convention. Among the speakers will be State President John R. Clements, the Rev. F. O. Belden of Mt. Vernon, vice president of the state organization, state superintendent of missions, the Rev. J. R. Sizoo of Walden, and Harold A. Waite, the new field secretary of the state. The music will be a feature this year and it is expected that a chorus of at least fifty voices under the able leadership of the Rev. R. P. Ingersoll will assist in the service. The Christian Endeavor hymnal "Service Songs" will be used.

It is expected that delegates from all over the county will be present and the Kingston Local Union of Christian Endeavor are making extensive preparations with the society of the First Presbyterian Church to make the stay of the delegates not only of profit but of enjoyment as well.

OFF TO WAR—BERLIN STREET SCENE.

Off for the front—the picture was snapped in Berlin on a street leading to a railway station. The time is early in the morning, and the young soldier is entraining that day for the front. The girl, who is carrying his rifle, is walking to the station to say goodbye. She has twisted flowers and leaves in his helmet and about his waist. Despite the imminent parting, the young soldier looks happy at the prospects of getting into action. Neither does the girl betray undue regrets that he is off for the front.

The Lady Who Danced the Minuet.

The minuet was ever the aristocrat of dances. Before the lady of the eighteenth century elected to step the dainty measure she had many points to master, for to dance the minuet was to court criticism. The plunge taken, she wore a lappet on her shoulder to tell the company she proposed to make or mar her ballroom reputation. Another point of etiquette lay in the gloves. A soiled pair was good enough for the country dance, but an absolutely new pair had to adorn the fair hands which graced the minuet. And so the lady of the eighteenth century on dancing bent set out with two pairs in her satchel.—London Mail.

Justification For "Gent."

As to "gent," it is startling to find Spenser using the word. But it is an adjective—"he lov'd, as was his lot, a lady gent"—that is to say, gentle. It is rather unfortunate, by the way, that we have in modern English no word that will stand for "ladies and gentlemen." Our forefathers could do it with "gentles," but "Mr. Chairman and gentlefolk" would only raise a laugh. The Germans have "die Herrschaft." You can ask if the master and mistress of the house are at home with this expression, and a German guide at a show place will call the attention of "die Herrschaft" to its wonders.—London Chronicle.

Prayer for the Day.

Forgive us if this day we have done or said anything to increase the pain of the world. Pardon the unkind word, the impatient gesture, the hard and selfish deed, the failure to show sympathy and kindly help where we had the opportunity, but missed it; and enable us so to live that we may daily do something to lessen the tide of human sorrow, and add to the sum of human happiness.—F. B. Meyer.

YOUNGEST RUSSIAN PRISONER—15 YRS. OLD

YOUNGEST RUSSIAN PRISONER OF WAR—15 YEARS OLD.

Fifteen years old, the youngest Russian prisoner of war held by the Germans has excited much interest in the camp where he has been placed. The child was a member of a volunteer regiment and was taken in a desperate trench struggle.

Youngsters of 14 years are enlisted in the Russian army but none of them have yet been captured. The little chap shown in the photograph is on the march into Germany with several hundred other prisoners. He kept up steadily with the men in line, making 35 miles a day.

EDWARD DE RESZKE

EDOUARD DE RESZKE STARVING IN POLISH CELLAR.

New York, April 27.—The American Polish Relief Society of which Mme. Marcella Sembrich is president, has received word that Edouard de Reszke, for many years a Metropolitan opera singer, brother of Joan de Reszke, tenor, is living in a cellar in Poland. He has no fuel, no oil, no coffee and is reduced to destitution as a result of the war. His estate has been reduced to ashes, his horses and stock taken by the armies and he has had nothing left of his wordly goods.

Diseases Handed Down.

Noah and the other patriarchs didn't have nearly as many different kinds of diseases to face, because they hadn't enough ancestors to hand them down a variety. Consequently their constitutions were not constantly being weakened as are ours today. For example, there is no reference in very ancient literatures to a cold in the head. The Greeks and Romans seem to have been the first peoples to suffer from it.

HOUDON, THE SCULPTOR.

Known In This Country Mainly by His Statue of Washington.

Since the days of the cathedral builders France has never been without great masters of the chisel. Traditions and an ever accumulating skill have been passed on as from father to son through generations immemorial. With all that "apostolic succession" of genius we of another race are strangely unfamiliar. One name, however, we associate with that of our first president, and for this reason, and not because Jean Antoine Houdon was the leading sculptor of his time, is he sometimes mentioned in the United States.

As the "first sculptor of his day" Houdon was invited in 1784 by Thomas Jefferson, representing the state of Virginia, to make a statue of General Washington. On July 28, 1785, the sculptor with three assistants sailed in the company of Benjamin Franklin from Southampton, bound for Philadelphia. The journey required nearly two months and Houdon did not arrive at Mount Vernon until Oct. 2.

Two weeks were occupied in modeling the bust, making a life mask, and taking many measurements, with all of which the artist departed rejoicing, and, thanks to the rapid ocean service of the time, was home again on Christmas day.

The result of this trip was the notable marble which stands in the state house at Richmond, our most trustworthy portrait of the first president.—Scribner's.

The roads are very dry and dusty. A good rain is much needed in this section. Our commissioner of highways has overlooked the fact that there is still a road in this end of the town, and one that is very much in need of a few new railings and other repairs. Of course the local residents probably do not need much of a road anyway, having always been used to the condition now prevailing, but it is very evident that the general traveling public does judging from the various comments one hears.

We understand that the Hughes bungalow will be occupied this season by a family from Brooklyn.

Sunday was by far the hottest day of the season. The thermometer registering 98 in the shade here during the afternoon.

Burton Bergher was a caller at Loveland farm on Sunday.

Makes Old Rugs Look Like New

Sprinkle a little Nomordust across your rug, then sweep it ahead of you as you go.

You'd think the rug was new, so bright will be the colors.

Nomordust attracts dust and dirt like a magnet.

If you use Nomordust, you need never again wear a dusting cap. You can dust your ornaments and furniture before you sweep, then leave them uncovered, and they'll be as clean when you finish sweeping as when you started.

It makes sweeping easier, too, and prevents repeated dusting. You can clean any room in half the time if you use Nomordust, and you need only sweep half as often, for every time you do sweep you get all the dirt (it clings to the powder), whereas ordinary sweeping spreads the dust from one part of a room to another.

Fine for wood floors and linoleums as well as rugs. Get a 10c can to-day from your favorite grocer—he'll refund your money if you're not more than pleased. 3

GERMAN TROOPS EVACUATE LIZERNE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, April 27.—(By wireless).—Lizerne, head of the German wedge on the west bank of the Ypres canal and half a mile from the canal, has been evacuated by the German troops. This is admitted in today's report from the general staff.

The new German lines about Ypres are being held firmly, the report adds, the attacks of the British troops upon the positions captured there having completely broken down. In these attacks the British forces suffered heavy losses.

Walking on Slippery Places.

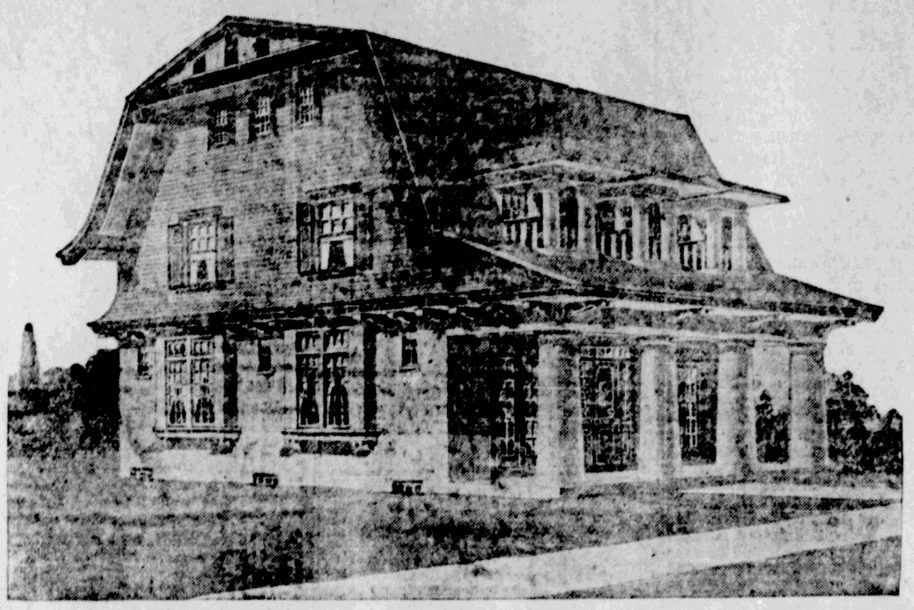
A letter carrier explains why he and the other members of his calling rarely if ever fall when walking on slippery sidewalks and climbing ice coated steps. He says:

"When passing over sleety places we don't walk erect, but bend forward, taking short steps and never letting one foot get far away from the other. Then, when we step, the foot is put down solidly, all of it at once, on the ground, with no heel and toe movement, which leads to slips and falls. It's not graceful, this way of walking, but it's safe, and I can pass any ordinary pedestrian on a slippery day and be in no danger of falling, while he is constantly slipping."—New York World.

Care of the Teeth.

Without good teeth there cannot be proper chewing; without proper chewing there cannot be proper digestion; without proper digestion there cannot be proper nourishment; without proper nourishment there cannot be good health. Without health what is life? Brushing the teeth is not enough for their good health. Let the mouth be purified for its rest by rinsing it with a cleansing mouth bath, else some good sterilising agent, such as camphor, hydrogen peroxide, the proportion being a few drops to a glassful of warm water. Then fill the mouth with milk of magnesia, allowing it to permeate every corner of the mouth and all the crevices between the teeth.

A Modified Colonial Residence, No. 109



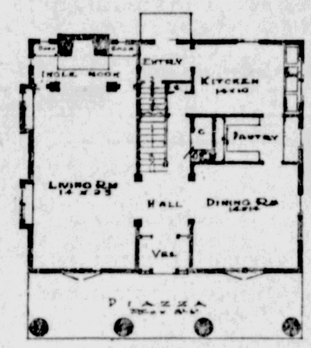
This illustration depicts a modified colonial residence with gambrel roof design that is particularly artistic, and one that offers a homelike interior of unusual charm. Four massive columns carry the extension of the roof that forms the piazza. These convey an impression of solidity and substantial worth to the house, at the same time providing a pleasing feature of the exterior. Mullioned windows and pretty little columned balcony dormers and brackets relieve this design of any sense of heaviness, due to the overhang of the second story and the weight of the cornice. In fact, it makes a particularly attractive home from every standpoint. The width of the house is 35 feet and the depth 30 feet, exclusive of the piazza. The piazza is 35x8½ feet over all, and is provided with a solid cement floor.

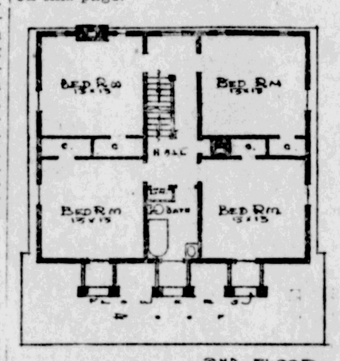
The exterior of the residence calls for rough cast stucco for the first story, with shingles above to the upper gable, where panelled stucco is employed.

The main entrance to the house is through a handsome colonial doorway and vestibule into a central hall. Off the hall to the left is the spacious living room 14 x 23 feet. This room with its added ingle nook 14 x 6 feet, is one of the features of the house. This ingle nook has a handsome columned entrance with cozy seats on either side, and bookcases flanking the attractive fireplace. Off the staircase hall to the left through French doors is the dining room 14 x 14, plentifully lighted with its two windows and double French doors leading direct to the front piazza. An ample pantry, kitchen and rear entrance hall completes the first floor hall. An easy staircase at the rear of the hall leads to the second floor where four spacious bedrooms are found. The two front bedrooms have an added feature in the little balconies, access to which is gained through French doors. These give the chambers all the practical advantages of the sleeping porch with none of its faults. These bedrooms are all provided with ample clothes closets. A linen closet handy to the bathroom is provided. The bathroom is of generous size 7 x 10 feet, and can be finished with a tiled floor and wainscot or without, as the owner might desire. Stairs are provided to the third floor which can be left unfinished, or if one wishes, two good sized rooms may be finished off.

The basement extends under the whole house exclusive of the piazza, and gives ample room for heating plant, storage, laundry and vegetable room.

For detailed plans and estimate of cost consult any local architect or builder whose advertisement appears on this page.





Colors and Complexions.

Light blue makes blond complexions look ashen.

Dark blue sets off a blond complexion in high relief by supplying a suitable background.

Blue is unbecoming to a brunette unless her cheeks be florid. If she be sallow it makes her face look tawny.

Green has the same effect as blue upon brunettes, but makes the cheeks of a fair face look pinker.

Red heightens the effect of pale brunette beauty.

Yellow is highly becoming to a pale brunette, especially in artificial light. It softens an olive skin and gives it a creamy tint.—New York World.

The First Requisite.

There isn't much use in telling a girl you would die for her unless you carry a pretty heavy life insurance.

CULTURE.

The secret of culture is to learn that a few great points steadily reappear alike in the poverty of the obscurest farm and in the miscellany of metropolitan life and that these few alone are to be regarded—the escape from all false ties, courage to be what we are and love of what is simple and beautiful. Independence and cheerful relation, these are the essentials—these and the wish to serve, to add somewhat to the well being of men.—Emerson.

Awful Recollection.

When we consider germs we shudder to think of all the slates we licked during childhood.—Kansas City Judge.

Saving a Gunboat.

When the United States gunboat Princeton struck an uncharted submerged rock in the harbor at Pago Pago, Samoa, a very unusual engineering feat was employed to save the craft. A pinnacle of the rock which was struck entered the hold of the ship, filling the rent torn in the hull and preventing any progress being made. It was possible to keep the water out by means of canvas and plank sheathing. Then the projection of rock which had cut into the boat was cut from its ledge and by re-enforcing and cementing made fast so that it plugged the hole it had made. This accomplished, the Princeton was able to proceed to drydock for repairs.—Exchange.

World's High Trees.

Jarrah trees in the Australian forests grow to a height of 120 feet; karl trees to 200 feet.

A RARE DECORATION.

Austria's Grand Cross of the Order of Maria Theresa.

The grand cross of the order of Maria Theresa is today one of the most exclusive as well as one of the most brilliant of surviving orders. It was founded by the great empress of that name in 1757 in honor of the victory of her troops over Frederick the Great at Kolin. Its members are elected by ballot on the part of the chapter, the sovereign having no voice in the matter unless he happens to possess the order, although he is the instrument of its bestowal and the signer of the patent.

In the past hundred years, until August, 1914, only fifty-eight members had been thus admitted to the order, and at the beginning of the war in 1914 there were but three knights left, all of the third and lowest class. One was the Emperor Francis Joseph, who won the cross in 1848 on the battlefield of Santa Lucia against the Italians. The second was the Duke of Cumberland, father of the sovereign Duke of Brunswick, who received the cross for gallantry at the battle of Langensalza, where as crown prince of Hanover he helped his father, the blind King George, to direct the operations of his troops. The third was Prince Alphonse de Bourbon, claimant to the throne of the two Sicilies and popularly known as the Count of Caserta. He won his cross by the part he played in the superb defense of Gaeta, the last stronghold of the Bourbons.

The eldest son of the holder of this coveted decoration is entitled to free education in Austria's military academy.—Argonaut.

Joy of Obliviousness.

"How did you like my turning off the gas at 10 while you and that young fool were in the parlor last night?" asked her father.

"Did you?" she responded innocently, and father knew the true meaning of the word failure.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Hard Task.

"Miss May certainly has the male contingent at her feet. But she is rather a capricious belle, isn't she?"

"Yes; a bell who is going to be very hard to ring."—Baltimore American.

GERMAN SOLDIERS "DECORATING" CARS TAKING THEM TO FRONT.

No German troop train ever gets past its first stop without being fantastically decorated by the exuberant soldiers inside. The photograph shows soldiers of the Kaiser making a car on their train more artistic. They have drawn a skull and crossbones, a caricature of Tommy Atkins, have scrawled "Auf Wiederrsehn" in large letters, and written "On to Paris" many times on the car's side.

Generally the troop trains are gayly decorated with evergreens, flowers, bunting, flags, and keep the regimental brass band blaring all day long.

The same trains which go to the battlefronts as troop trains, return to the interior of Germany as hospital trains.

REWARD FOR FINDING LOST MISS JORDAN

District Attorney Cunningham has announced that he will pay a reward of $25 for information which will lead to the recovery of Miss Mary Jordan, the 17 year old daughter of John Jordan of Ashokan, who disappeared after coming to Kingston from her home early Sunday evening, April 18.

Miss Jordan is about 5 feet and 4 inches in height and is well developed for her age. When she left her home she wore a red dress and plush coat, back hat and black shoes. She has reddish brown hair.

Nothing has been seen of her since her arrival in Kingston and her family is nearly frantic over her mysterious disappearance. It is thought that a married man whose name it now seems inadvisable to mention, may have met her after her arrival in Kingston.

Any information may be transmitted to District Attorney Cunningham or Assistant District Attorney Traver, or may be telephoned to 1699-J.

KINGSTON MAY GET IN MOVIES

C. S. Eddy, managing director of the United Film Syndicate of Los Angeles, is in town in the interest of his company. Mr. Eddy has a new idea for the making of screen plays. The plan is to have a series of pictures such as "Runaway June," etc., with the scenes laid in various cities. The plan is to place the names of the cities where the pictures were taken on the film and not conceal the name of the place where the film was taken, as it now done. The cities would obtain wide publicity by his plan and Mr. Eddy in no way wants financial backing. He is considering laying one of the scenes in Kingston.

Crescents Won the Game.

The Crescent baseball club of this city added another victory to their string when they defeated the fast North Rondouts in a twelve inning game by a score of 11 to 10. The game was featured by the hard hitting of the Crescents. Sopher starred with the bat getting three two baggers and a triple Leininger was also there getting two two baggers. The whole Crescent team played a fine game. Battery for the Crescents was Robinson and McMahon. Next Sunday the Crescents will play the fast Barmann A. C. at McVey's field. All clubs between the ages of 16 to 20 wishing to book games with the Crescents write to H. Leininger, South Wall street.

HARVEY AND THE BLOOD.

How His Theory of Circulation Was Born and Demonstrated.

It was while studying at Padua under a professor who had discovered the valves in the veins that Harvey discovered the circulation of the blood. He was curious to know what these valves were for, and, finding that they all pointed in the same direction, he could think of no reason for their existence unless it might be to prevent the blood from flowing backward.

Placing a ligature on his arm, he found that one set of vessels, the arteries, became distended with blood on the side nearest to the heart, while the veins became distended with blood on the side farthest from the heart. This to him meant only that the blood flowed from the heart through the arteries and back to the heart through the veins. It also explained the beating of the heart and the throbbing of the pulses.

But the medical and surgical world received this epoch making discovery with scorn. Harvey published a book on his discovery, and his practice fell off considerably. Doctors scoffed, and the public looked on him as a crank. It was a quarter of a century after the book appeared before the discovery was accepted by the learned men of the world.—New York World.

The Dumb Waiter.

The value of the old fashioned labor saving device, the dumb waiter, cannot be exaggerated. Instead of carrying up the many, many things that daily have to come from the cellar they are placed on the dumb waiter. No energy is wasted, and one trip will save three. It serves the place also of the more modern linen chute. The linen chute is not to be tabooed, for it has its uses, but it is practically wasting space to have both it and the dumb waiter. In many houses the dumb waiter stops short at the second floor—the reason why has never been discovered—or sometimes it starts at the first floor instead of in the cellar, another enigma. This is as impractical as it would be to have the sidewalk end before it reaches the house. It simply doesn't answer the purpose for which it was intended.—Woman's Home Companion

Buddha.

The origin of Buddhism, which ranks in numbers among the great religions of the world, is wrapped in much uncertainty, and the personality of its founder is more or less obscure. It is generally believed that Buddha was a prince of a petty Indian nation and that he was born about the beginning of the fifth century before Christ. He was named Siddhartha and was also known as Sakya, his family name. The title of Buddha, which was given him, means "the enlightened." He spent many years in study and solitary meditation and finally evolved the philosophy which he preached for over forty years in northern India. He was about eighty when he died.—Youth's Companion.

Tuning Forks.

The tuning fork was the invention of John Stone, royal trumpeter, in 1811. Though the pitch of forks varies slightly with changes of the temperature or by rust, they are the most accurate means of determining pitch. Tuning forks are capable of being made of any pitch within certain limits, but those commonly used are the notes A and C, giving the sounds represented by the second and third spaces in the treble stave.

His Walking War Record.

The Dundee Courier has this laconic war note:

"Soldiers can be as laconic as sailors. The late Sir George Groves used to tell of an old soldier who went about begging, bearing a placard: 'Actions, 7; wounds, 9; children, 8; total, 24.'"

Bismarck's Reproof.

Bismarck was shot at one day and his wife, greatly incensed at the would be assassin, declared that if she was in heaven and saw him coming up a ladder she would push him down into hell.

"Hush, my dear," said Bismarck. "You would not be there with such thoughts as those."

Theory and Practice.

"Dinglebat has original ideas about family government. He says every home should be a little republic where universal toleration prevails and everyone has a voice in the government."

"Yes; his family is managed on that plan. But he and Mrs. Dinglebat have the same old wrangle every day as to who shall be president."

Breaking Into Society.

"I'm green in society. Would it be all right to shake hands with yonder distinguished looking individual?"

"I'm green myself. But I'd advise you to go a trifle slow."

"Pshaw! No man can make a serious mistake by being a trifle friendly."

"Yes, he can, too. That may be the butler."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

GRATITUDE.

Gratitude is the fairest blossom that springs from the soul, and the heart of man knoweth none so fragrant, while its opponent, ingratitude, is a deadly weed, not only poisonous in itself, but impregnating the very atmosphere in which it grows with fetid vapors.

Winning a Smile.

The Small Boy—Are you the boneless man?

The Caller—Boneless? Why, no. What gave you that idea?

The Boy—Pa said you was a contortionist.

"A contortionist?"

"Yes. He said you was always patting yourself on the back."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Knew What He Meant.

"It's five years ago today, and I'm going to celebrate my wouldn't wedding."

"Wouldn't wedding? Wooden, you mean?"

"No; wouldn't. Five years ago today since I asked a girl if she'd marry me and she said she wouldn't."—Browning Magazine.

am quite willing to stand aside for the governor. But the more I think of it, the more I am convinced that he ought not to take the responsibility of serving on this committee as New York's representative. There will be several troublesome problems before the committee on resolutions and there is no reason why our candidate for governor should be held personally responsible in the campaign for the precise language of the platform. Take for instance the subject of trusts and the subject of beer resolutions. It may be assumed that we are not going to adopt any demagogic declarations on these matters, but whatever the platform says, if Roosevelt is on the committee as New York's representative, every Democratic newspaper in the state will be demanding to know why this was not done and why that was done."

Roosevelt to Platt, May 18:

"I at once return Mr. Quigg's kind and generous letter which accompanies your equally kind and generous one of the 15th instant. Evidently the thing has gone so far that it would be wise to have Mr. Quigg kept on the committee on resolutions. I should like, however, very much to have the chance to talk over with him and you some of the resolutions. It was delightful to see you in Washington."

These telegrams then were read without comment or cross-examination of the colonel:

Roosevelt to Platt, Dec. 6, 1900. (Telegram):

"Am greatly concerned because charter commission has arranged lunch for myself and Odell next Wednesday, this being only day they could get that would suit us both. Do you really regard it as important for me to come? Can't Woodruff take my place? Does president really expect me? Wire answer."

Platt to Roosevelt, Dec. 6, 1900. (Telegram):

"Think your absence from meeting of commission will be deplored by the president and the other governors. Meeting of charter commission seems to me should be secondary. Let them postpone. Woodruff will not answer."

Roosevelt to Platt, Dec. 7, 1900. (Telegram):

"All right of course in view of your second telegram. I will come but you are not an easy boss."

A letter from Roosevelt to Platt of April 3, 1901, asked the senator when he could lunch with him next week at the Lawyers' Club.

"I should just like to lunch with you alone," wrote the colonel.

Barnum then read several letters to Platt from Roosevelt while he was vice president, attempting to show Roosevelt consulted Platt while he was vice president as well as while governor. The letters were read consecutively without cross-examination.

When the short letters were finished, Barnum asked:

"Did you lunch with Senator Platt on or about July 3 at the Lawyers' Club, New York?"

"I could not say as to the date; I have lunched there with him," was the answer.

"Did you discuss New York state politics?"

"I do not remember—no, I am sure we did not discuss state affairs."

"Did you seek Senator Platt's advice?"

"You misuse that word 'advice,'" said the colonel. "Use rather the word 'consultation.'"

"Very well, I'll strike it out and use 'consultation,' if you prefer it," retorted Barnum.

"Were your consultations with Platt ever of a social nature?"

"I think we always talked politics," replied the colonel with a grin, his voice ascending to the familiar falsetto.

The following letter was read:

Platt to Roosevelt, July 26, 1900:

"Is there any real good reason why Mr. Brockway should be removed from the superintendency of the Elmira reformatory? The most I know is that the World and Herald are pressing for this man's scalp. I know that on previous occasions the World was actuated simply by malicious motives and I presume it is so at this time. However, what I wish to know is if there was any good reason why this thing should be held open until after election. It seems that the board has asked for Mr. Brockway's resignation the 31st of July. I do not want to interfere with equal and exact justice for every one, but I do not wish to see any one railroaded out of office because the World says he must go."

"Was Brockway removed?" asked Barnum.

"He was not," replied the ex-president firmly.

This came next:

Roosevelt to Platt, July 29th, 1900:

"Seth Low, Albert Shaw and a whole raft of other friends of Brockway's have been writing on his account and if I could have held the thing up I would have. The board however, is in deadly earnest. The Herald and World have nothing to do with these charges except that they have repeated some that have leaked out long after the board had taken action on them. I am afraid nothing can be done in Brockway's case."

"Mr. Low was then the mayor-elect of New York?" was asked.

"He was," said the colonel.

"You believed Mr. Platt's influence would be a good thing for Low's administration and for the city of New York?" asked Barnum.

"I did" Mr. Roosevelt replied.

"And you so told Mr. Low?"

"I so told Mr. Low" was the answer.

These letters then were read without material cross-examination:

Roosevelt to Platt, Chicago, October 7, 1900.

"We have had great fun on this trip though the work has been very wearing. I think I can say that the trip has been a successful one so far. Of course I do no wish to prophesy in public, but speaking privately I think we shall carry Kansas, South Dakota, Wyoming, Washington and possibly both Utah and Nebraska among the states that Bryan carried four years ago.

"I met Hanna today and had a very nice talk with him. Good Lord how I hope we can beat Pettigrew for the senate. That particular swine seems to me on the whole the most noxious of the entire drove."

Roosevelt to Platt, vice-president's chamber, March 27, 1901.

"If the chance comes along will you not keep my old friend Mr. Joseph Murray in mind? As you know he is no longer in office and I suppose will have a little difficulty in getting into private business again after his two years of absence at Albany. He is an exceptionally honest and faithful man in whom I have particular confidence."

Platt to Roosevelt, March 29, 1901.

"The one thing which you ask of me is one of the worst problems possible. Murray was removed from the office which he had filled for two or three years for inefficiency. He never went to Albany except to draw his pay and the superintendent of public buildings told me confidentially that he was not worth anything as an assistant; and that he did not render him any assistance whatever. I do not know but he would in some other position perform his function, but his past career does not warrant the presumption. You say 'he is an exceptionally honest and faithful man.' Did you know these facts and these representations as reiterated to me by the superintendent of public buildings? I do not imagine you would endorse a man so highly who was not worthy. I tell you this history, of course, in confidence, trusting that you will not use it."

Roosevelt to Platt, July 3, 1901.

"What day next week except Wednesday will you be in town and able to lunch with me, say at the Lawyers' Club? I shall not ask any one else. I should just like to lunch alone with you."

Roosevelt to Platt, White House, Nov. 19, 1901:

"Mayor-elect Low told me positively he expected to see you in New York. I urged him as strongly as I could to do so."

"P. S.—To my great pleasure I now see that Mr. Low has announced in the papers that he intends to consult you at once."

Court House Banana Tree.

In the near future it is expected that the sheriff's office will enjoy bananas from their own banana tree —that is if the tree bears fruit. This morning the sheriff's office was presented with a banana plant by ex-Mayor William D. Brinnier from his banana plantation in the Isle of Pines and with the aid of some of the trusties of the jail the tree was planted in the center of the tulip bed in the front yard of the court house by employes of the sheriff's office. Just how soon the tree will begin to yield fruit is not known, but there is nothing to equal sitting under the shade of your own banana tree and picking the luscious fruit from its branches. In a few days it is expected that a sign will be hung in front of the court house bearing the warning not to throw banana peels on the sidewalk.

Happy or Brave.

When you cannot be happy, you can be brave. There are things nobody can enjoy especially aches, pains, disappointments, unkindnesses, and things of that sort. Nobody expects that you boys and girls can be just as happy over your troubles as you are over your blessings. But that does not excuse you for fretting and whimpering, just as soon as things go wrong. If you cannot be happy, you can be brave.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Yory, Apr. 27—Various groups of stocks moved in opposite directions on the stock exchange this morning and for the first 15 minutes the tone was uncertain. The Interborough Metropolitan issues were active and strong, reflecting confidence over the proposed plan for re-establishing the preferred on a dividend basis. The common moved up ⅞ to 21½ and the preferred 1¾, to 71¾. The copper group was irregular, Anaconda and Inspiration both sustaining fractional losses, while Ray Consolidated advanced ⅝ to 25⅜, and Miami ⅝ to 28¾. The specialities also showed a lack of uniformity, American Beet Sugar rising to ¾ to 49, while International Steam Pump and Railway Steel Spring yielded slightly. The railroad stocks generally were lower, Missouri Pacific opening down ½ at 12½, and smaller recessions were noted in Union Pacific and Reading. New Haven fell ¾ to 67¼. Steel Common was in good demand and after declining ¼ to 57⅛ recovered the loss.

Noon.—The tone was strong in the late forenoon. There was an upturn of ¾ in United States Steel Common which sold at 58⅛ and the advance had an influence on trading all around, and recoveries were soon in order in nearly all of the leading issues. The Interborough-Metropolitan issues declined fractionally, the common being off ⅜ at 21⅛, and the preferred ⅞ to 70⅞. The copper issues failed to respond to the strength shown in the rest of the list and declined slightly. Money loaning at 2 per cent.

The stock market closed steady; governments unchanged, other bonds steady.

2:30 p. m.—There was an unsettled tone in the late afternoon and movements took the shape of sharp declines. U. S. Steel Common which sold at 58¾ yielded to 57⅛ and losses of over one point were sustained in Reading, Union Pacific and the Copper issues.

Goethe and the Cherry Tree.

When I was a boy, I planted a cherry tree, and watched its growth with delight. Spring frosts killed the blossoms, and I had to wait another year before the cherries were ripe— then the birds ate them; another year the caterpillars; then a greedy neighbor; then the blight. Nevertheless, when I have a garden again, I shall plant a cherry tree!—Goethe.

New Version of Old Song.

Grandpa was showing little Helen the pictures in a popular magazine. Coming to a page which advertised men's wearing apparel, he called certain garments "breeches." Whereupon the little three-year-old, hearing a familiar sound that carried suggestions, began to sing "London breeches falling down!"

He Had Not Spent It.

A small boy was spending the Fourth of July with his Uncle Sidney, who was a few years older than he. His parents, not wishing to trust such a small lad with money, had given his Uncle Sidney the money with which to buy firecrackers, candy, etc. The next day his grandma said: "Well, Lloyd, how did you spend the Fourth?" He replied: "Why, grandma, I didn't spend it. Sidney did."

ODDS AND ENDS.

The Luther League of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Redeemer will hold a regular meeting at 8 o'clock this evening.

Haiti's Old Citadel.

On the summit of a Haitian mountain over 4,000 feet high stand the wonderful ruins of the great citadel La Ferriere, built by the black king Christophe. Some of the walls are eighty feet high and sixteen feet thick, and heavy batteries of old fifty-six and thirty-two pound guns are still in position. They were laid to guard every approach of what was intended to be the last asylum of Haitian independence. Springs of water still exist in the interior, and there were secret subterranean passages and secret chambers for holding his hoarded wealth, much of which is supposed to be still buried there. Although partly destroyed by the earthquake in 1842, which demolished nearly all of the important buildings in the country, the colossal ruins of the citadel still attest the gigantic work of Christophe, and the world still wonders how the work was done and how the material for the construction and armament was ever got to the top of the mountain. Little authentic information has ever been obtained on the subject, and the whole enterprise is clouded in romance and anecdote.—Argonaut.

Dust Clouds Armies Make.

An army on the march along dry roads naturally throws up very heavy dust clouds. To those who haven't been trained one dust cloud looks very much like another, but to a soldier these dust clouds tell a very clear story.

The dust clouds thrown up by infantry, for example, hang in a low, thick cloud. The longer the cloud the more men underneath it, and a scout can by this means make a fairly accurate guess of the number of men on the march.

Cavalry on the march sends up a dust cloud that is much higher and thinner than that of infantry. The most distinctive of these dust clouds, however, is that made by wagons and heavy guns. The dust rises in little groups of clouds, quite different from the long clouds of cavalry and infantry.

So even when unable to see the actual cause of the dust, a scout can tell many miles away what kind of force is passing along a road.—Exchange.

Indifferent Librarians.

The Bodleian library has not always been fortunate in its custodians. When George III. presented a copy of the newly published "Voyages of Captain Cook" to the library the then librarian —we mercifully omit his name—promptly sent it to a friend, with a note asking him to keep it for a twelvemonth or so, as otherwise if the university men knew the book was available he would be pestered to death by applications for it.

The problem of storage for the Bodleian library is no new one and no doubt it will recur from age to age. But Oxford is probably a long way yet from any likelihood of adopting Lord Chancellor Westbury's suggestion as to the proper way of "removing the Bodleian." His proposal was that the books should be wheeled to the parks and burnt there.—London Standard.

Strength of a Shark.

Given special advantages, such as that of holding the end of a stout rope at the other extremity of which is a hook fixed in a shark's mouth, man may, with the assistance of a number of his fellows, have the best of the shark. But alone and in the water the advantage is wholly and absolutely the other way, and the strongest swimmer and the bravest heart fail when the tyrant of the sea seeks to make his acquaintance. The shark is gifted with great strength, a savage temper, dogged perseverance and exceptional power of jaw. The lion and tiger may mangle, the crocodile may lacerate, the bulldog may hold fast—the shark alone of living creatures possesses the power of nipping off a human limb at a bite.

Its Own Reward.

Dr. Jones leaped into the air, dropping the evening paper he was reading as the telephone bell split the peaceful atmosphere.

"Who is it? What is it? Where is it?" he shouted as he took the receiver down.

"Please come at once, doctor," piped a small voice. "It's Tommy Brown speaking."

"Who's ill at your house?" asked the doctor.

"Everybody, ceptin' me. I was naughty, so mother wouldn't let me have any of the lovely mushrooms father picked yesterday."—Exchange.

Throwing Rice.

Throwing rice at a wedding symbolizes not the expression of good luck, but it is a metaphorical flight of arrows shot at the bridegroom. In uncivilized ages most nations were accustomed to the forcible capture of a bride by her lover, and the attempts on the part of her male relatives to prevent her husband from carrying her away is typified by a volley of rice instead of more fatal missiles.

On the Horns of a Dilemma

He Was Obliged to Sit Between Them.

By F. A. MITCHEL

It is supposed that all marriages among rich persons are marriages of convenience and without love. That is not the case. Miss Anita De Roode and I are lovers; we are rich, and I expect to marry her. I admit that there has yet been no formal engagement. That is because Miss De Roode has not made up her mind. Whether her hesitation comes from a doubt that she loves me well enough to marry me or whether she is looking for a man of prominence as well as wealth I don't know, for she has not told me.

I went to Lenox yesterday, where Miss De Roode lives, and begged her to give me a final answer. The spring is on, and spring is the season for love. We walked out in the spacious grounds surrounding the De Roode mansion, and so fragrant was the air, so entrancing the lances of sunlight piercing the branches on which the leaves were sprouting, so delicious were the songs of the birds, that it seemed to me if she loved me she could not help responding to my impassioned words.

Nevertheless I returned to the city disappointed. I was not refused. I was still held in doubt. Anita admitted that she preferred me to any other man and did not tell me that her feeling for me was not love. But she would not promise to marry me. I suppose I must possess my soul in patience. If I were poor or not even very rich I would consider myself dismissed, but there are nowadays so few of us millionaire bachelors who have anything except our wealth to recommend us that when a passably refined chap like myself asks a girl to marry him she at least hesitates before turning him down.

I had a letter from Chesborough this morning—Chesborough is in Rome—about a man he met there who is coming to New York; second son or something like that of an earl, with an elder brother dying of a lingering disease. Chesborough has given the fellow a letter of introduction to me and wants me to put him into my set. I don't see how I am to do so without letting it be known that he is a nobleman, and Chesborough says that he wishes to remain incog. Doesn't want to be fawned on, I suppose.

• • • • • • •

Chesborough's friend, Chichester, called at the club today and inquired for me. I was there, as I usually am, after 4 p. m., and put him up with a visitor's ticket for two weeks. I hope he'll do the same for me when I go to London, but the Londoner has a convenience in his club in a house rule that no stranger is to be received. However, Chichester seems to be a good fellow, and I am fond of Chesborough and glad to oblige him.

Chichester says he doesn't care to know many people, only a few of my intimate friends. He positively declines to be introduced as anything but a plain English gentleman of the middle class. I have taken him with me to the Ashtons and the Spencers and have arranged for a week end at Lenox with the De Roodes. He tells me that the income his father allows him is not sufficient to return favors from multimillionaires, and this is the reason for his incog.

• • • • • • •

Just returned from the De Roodes, having left Chichester there to continue his visit for a few days. Anita seems much pleased with him.

• • • • • • •

Three weeks have passed since Chichester came to New York and I introduced him to Anita. He has passed the principal part of that time at Lenox. What it means I can't imagine unless he has admitted to Anita his identity. I could ask him if he has done so, or I could ask the question of her. But I shall ask neither. If they wish to make a match they will not find me a dog in the manger.

• • • • • • •

What I have been looking for has happened. Received a note this morning from Anita announcing her engagement with Chichester. She doesn't say that she prefers him to me or me to him. Of course he has told her that he is very near an earldom, and she expects me to understand that is the reason why he has supplanted me without her saying so. It is certainly a very good and practical reason, and I have no protest to make.

I had scarcely read the letter when in came Chichester for my congratulations. I managed to give them, affecting some warmth, but it certainly was difficult. He expressed himself indebted to me for life that I had introduced him to so admirable a woman. Then a troubled expression came over his face when he said:

"But how am I to bear the expenses attending an engagement with one whose position in the American social world is so exalted? My income is totally inadequate."

I believed that when his brother died he would have all the money he needed and could repay a loan, but of course I couldn't say so. I simply told him that it wouldn't trouble me at all to let him have what he needed. He grasped my hand with fervor and swore that if it were fated that he should come to the family title he would see that anything I wanted in England should be mine. He further stated that his fiancee was aware of his financial condition and had proposed that their engagement be not regularly announced until shortly before their marriage. After the wedding the bride would be liberal until such time as he succeeded to the title, which, if he lived long enough, he regarded as a certainty. To which I replied that in the meantime I would furnish funds which it would not be proper for the lady to furnish or for him to accept from her.

• • • • • • •

I have just come from a visit to Anita. She sent for me, she said, to assure herself that I placed no blame upon her. She could not put on paper what she could say verbally. Of course I must understand that marriage among us who are lifted by our possessions so far above ordinary persons must always be a matter for serious consideration. The prizes our wealth places within our grasp are not to be despised. Among the lofty and powerful the choice of a partner for life has always been circumscribed and usually a matter decided by the parents of the contracting parties.

I told her that she would be very unwise not to seize upon any such prize as came within her reach and that there was no blame whatever attached to giving up one whom she had never even accepted. Notwithstanding the practical view she took of the matter, she appeared a trifle disappointed that I did not show more grief at losing her.

"I have no doubt," she said in conclusion, "that you will find one much more worthy of you and one who will make you far happier than I."

"I shall find no one with either of these elements," I replied. "But I shall bear my loss without adding to your embarrassment."

• • • • • • •

A month has passed since I parted with Anita. She came to New York yesterday and wrote me a note desiring me to call upon her. I went to see her and found her in an uncomfortable state of mind. She did not tell me at once what troubled her, but began to ask me a lot of questions.

"How did you become acquainted with Mr. Chichester?"

"My friend Chesborough wrote me from Rome concerning him."

"Did you take pains to learn whether or no he was what he purported to be?"

"No; I took Chesborough's word for it. I did not and do not now doubt that he is the second son of an earl, the heir to the title having one foot in the grave."

"I have learned that the title is an empty one, the earl being without enough income for himself, without granting one to a younger son. Where do you suppose Mr. Chichester obtained the money on which to move in our set?"

I was on the horns of a dilemma. The one horn was a lie; the other was the position of one who had done a rival a favor and had taken advantage of the act with the lady in question. I avoided falling on either of these horns in this wise:

"That question," I said, "I do not feel called upon to answer. I am not Mr. Chichester's financial secretary."

"You introduced him to me. And now when I am in doubt about him you decline to help me in a matter involving the most important step a woman can take."

"I introduced Mr. Chichester without any expectation that you would become engaged to him."

"You mean without expecting that he would supplant you."

To this I made no reply.

"Why is it," she continued, "that you men always hang together? I have no woman friend who would treat a rival as you have treated Mr. Chichester."

"It is necessary for us men to stand by one another. We are so faulty that at any failure to do so we would fall like a stack of card houses."

"Nonsense! But to return to this question of where Mr. Chichester got the money he has been spending so lavishly. Do you mean to tell me that you do not know?"

Again I was cornered. I made no reply.

"You men are queer creatures," she continued. "If pressed too hard you will lie for one another. I will not push you too far for fear you will do so now. It is you who furnished Mr. Chichester the means to pose as my fiance."

There was no need to deny the statement, for she would not have made it unless positive of it.

"How did you learn that?" I asked.

"A cousin of mine is employed in a bank through which a check of yours payable to Mr. Chichester passed. He saw it and gave me the information."

It was evident that Mr. Chichester's hope of marrying a fortune in Miss De Roode was gone. My heart beat fast, but I maintained my outward equanimity. I looked at the ceiling.

"Have you seen Mr. Chichester lately?" Anita asked.

"Not for several days."

"He has gone to England. You have lost your advances to him."

"I can afford it, fortunately."

"This money was for the support of my fiance until after our marriage. Will you permit me to return it?"

"Certainly not."

"In what way can I show my appreciation of your generosity, your magnanimity?"

Her voice trembled as she spoke the words and she bent her eyes to the ground. These spoke far more plainly to me than her words.

I took her in my arms.

Must Put Country First.

To make parliament a decent working machine all the considerable parties must be willing to subordinate their party and personal interests to the needs of the country. This is what no party in any parliament of any country will at present do.—Adrian Ross.

Beer Replacing Spirits.

Beer drinking is increasing greatly in India, according to the Civil and Military Gazette of Tahore, India. It is stated that this does not mean, however, that the population is turning in greater degree to alcoholic drinks; it simply means that beer is displacing whisky, rum and other strong tipples.

NEW PLAN FOR STREET OILING

The street force under Superintendent Van Keuren are busy at work oiling the city streets. Only one half of the street is oiled at a time leaving the other half of the street open for traffic. This is done in order to allow the oil to set, and the city authorities have requested that all vehicles using the streets being oiled to keep on that side of the street that is not oiled.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

James Millard and Son have sold to The Heneph Company, Inc. three Ford touring cars.

Last August when Henry Ford announced that he would share his profits with each purchaser of a Ford car if the company made and sold 300,000 car at retail between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915 many people laughed at the idea of selling 300,000 cars within a year but now comes the statement from Mr. Ford, that a rebate of $50 on each car sold is assured, barring the unforeseen. At the present time the factory is about 75,000 cars behind orders and the factory at Detroit and branches are turning out 1,800 complete cars a day. With the assurance of a rebate of $50 in August the sales are expected to double. The rebate will mean a matter of $15,000,000 distributed throughout the country to Ford owners. At the present rate of production, figuring on an eight hour day, 3¾ completed machines leave the factory every minute.

The Other Door.

The John street entrance to the Kingston post office, which has been closed during the winter, has been opened for the summer months. Patrons of the post office who have been using the Fair street entrance find it difficult to accustom themselves to the change and most of them continue to use the door which they have been using since last fall.

Pearl Street Saw Mill.

The Misses Forsyth have installed temporarily a buzz saw and gasoline engine on their property on Pearl street to saw firewood for next winter.

The members selected their subjects for next year's papers, the general topic for study being "Russia." It was decided to hold an open meeting on the 22nd of May at the home of Mr. G. D. B. Hasbouck, at which time Miss Lola Marsh of New York city, formerly of Kingston, will deliver another of her interesting addresses. Each member of the club will be entitled to invite on guest. Officers were then elected for the ensuing year as follows: president, Mrs. Charles De La Vergne; vice president, Mrs. A. V. V. Kenyon; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Henry Van Hoevenberg. The meeting was brought to a close with a social hour.

"Creation" Chorus Wednesday Night.

Wednesday evening there will be a full rehearsal of the chorus for the Spring Musical Festival, which is to give "The Creation," at the new high school building, at 7:45 o'clock, promptly. As the festival is to be given May 24, 25, and 26, with the Creation, given on the last evening, it is now necessary that every rehearsal be well attended. Last evening there was a good sized and enthusiastic rehearsal of the altos held at the Y. M. C. A. building, and excellent work was done. At the rehearsal Wednesday evening, the chorus will vote for the festival conductor for this year's oratorio. The out-of-town choruses are making excellent progress, and this morning word was received from Marlborough, that the trained chorus there would like to join in the festival. This week, it is expected that the announcement as to soloists for the oratorio, will be made.

The Old Hand Engine.

A photograph of the old hand engine was taken by William Longyear in front of the central fire station this morning. Seated on the old engine were such well known exempts as George W. Newkirk and William Pratt, with the the old red hats, and Thomas Caplis. Billy was guiding the fiery steeds which were drawing the truck. The picture will be used during the forthcoming convention to show the contrast between the modern methods of fighting fire and the old style way of pumping with the hand engine from cisterns and brooks.

PLAYER-MANAGER OF BROOKLYN FED CLUB

Lee Magee, Youngest Leader in Major Leagues.

Lee Magee, whose proper name is Leopold Hoernschemeyer, manager of the Brooklyn Federals, is the youngest team leader in the major leagues. He was born in Cincinnati, O., June 4, 1880. Magee is of that type known as a smart ball player and a winning one, too. He has been in the major leagues only four years, but in that time he was one man in the Cardinal ranks who stood out as a persevering player, no matter what the score, or the standing of that team in the National league race.

Magee is a member of the Typographical union, and until he went around the world with the McGraw tourists, in the winter of 1913-14, he set type in the off-season.

Last winter he was active in rounding up players to strengthen the Brooklyn Tip Tops and spreading the winning spirit to the athletes already under contract.

Magee began his professional career in 1906, when he played for two weeks with the Meridian (Miss.) team of the Cotton States league as third baseman. In 1907, Magee played with Springfield, Ill.; Burlington, Ia.; and Waterloo, Ia. The next season found Magee back on the job as second baseman for Waterloo, developing fast.

After the 1909 season with Seattle, Magee was taken by the Cardinals and later farmed to Louisville. Returning to the Cardinals as infielder and outfielder, Magee stuck, until last winter, when he took advantage of the ten days' clause and became manager of the Brooklyn Tip Tops. Magee subbed in the infield and finally convinced Roger Bresnahan that he could play the outfield. Magee built up a clientele in St. Louis, and in fact, every city of the circuit, by his splendid fighting spirit and unwillingness to quit.

BASEBALL NOTES

Manager Birmingham of the Cleveland Indians may find a good outfielder in Walter Barbare.

• • •

Leslie Mann has invented a new sun glass that will enable him to look up through the glasses and down without them.

• • •

Pitcher "Buck" O'Brien, recently released by the Memphis club of the Southern league, is negotiating with the Providence club.

• • •

Outfielder Harry Wolter, after holding out on Los Angeles until the season was ready to start, finally signed at the figures offered him.

• • •

Ivy Wingo is making a fine showing in the outfield with the Cincinnati Reds, and it appears as if Herzog may give him a permanent berth there.

• • •

Manager Bill Carrigan of the Red Sox announces that he will carry eight pitchers this season, including his two lame ducks, Joe Wood and Vean Gregg.

• • •

The Memphis club has given George Merrit, last year's all-around performer, his unconditional release as a result of the failure to either trade or sell him to some other club.

• • •

Pitcher Ralph Cutting of the Milwaukee Brewers has notified the club management that he has quit baseball and will devote his time to running a dairy farm in New Hampshire.

• • •

Manager McGraw, it is said, would much have preferred to keep Catcher Bobby Marshall instead of Larry McLean, but you know about those ironclad contracts, and Larry had one of them.

• • •

It was a wonderful coup on the part of Schuyler Britton of St. Louis when, after much perseverance and unceasing appeal, he was able to persuade Bob Bescher to accept $8,000 a year from him.

• • •

Almost all the Phils are camera fiends and never go to the St. Petersburg training park without black boxes and films. Eddie Burns and Joe Oeschger get good results from vest-pocket kodaks.

• • •

The Chicago White Sox will have about six regulars hitting right-handed, while it is the other way with the Chicago Cubs, as Bresnahan has five, and possibly six, classed as regulars who are left-handed hitters.

• • •

Pitcher George Boehler will remain with the Tigers all season, so Manager Jennings says. Hughey has made up his mind to find out whether the Lawrenceburg barber really is a major league pitcher or a false alarm.

• • •

Frank Huelsman, the minor league Lajoie, has signed to play with Omaha. Frank has been hitting .400 or better most of his career and is the style of hitter who should make every other swat a home run in the Western league.

MANAGERS' WAYS ARE QUEER

Leader of Cincinnati Reds Was Quick to Grab Up Tommy Leach, Released by Chicago Cubs.

The ways of baseball managers, at times, are strange, strange ways. The case of Roger Bresnahan, who manages the Cubs, is a fair example.

Roger, who owned a ball player named Tommy Leach, discovered a short time ago that he would have no need for the veteran's services during 1915. At the same time Charles Herzog, who manages the Cincinnati Reds, discovered that he needed a veteran ball player, and he decided that Tommy Leach was the very ball player that he wanted to get.

"I'd like to get Leach from the Cubs and if some deal can be made Leach will wear a Cincinnati uniform in 1915," said Herzog.

Did Bresnahan immediately arrange a trade with Herzog for Leach? Did he sell Leach to Herzog and add a few thousand shekels to the bank account of the Cubs? No, Bresnahan didn't. He just released Leach outright, whereupon Herzog signed him up.

Tommy Leach.

In other words, Herzog got Leach for nothing, although he had publicly announced that he was willing to give cash or promising players to the Cubs for Leach.

"Doc" Cook's Ambition.

One athlete who will be sorely disappointed if his 1915 batting mark falls below the .300 mark is "Doc" Cook. "Doc" got away to the poorest kind of a start last season and the season was two months old before he had shaken the malaria out of his system. Even under this handicap he was knocking at the door of .300 when the season ended.

Pi-Pieh-Pipp Combination.

The combination of New York names—Pius Schwert, Cy Pieh and Walter Pipp—gives promise of some rare outbursts in the listing of double plays. One possibility is Pi to Pieh to Pipp. Another one is Peck to Pieh to Pipp, as Professor Peckinpaugh is familiarly known as Peck and often is so entered in the score.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, April 27.—"Being a champion has its handicap," sighed Jess Willard.

"Yes," we coached.

"Before I was champion I was just a big white hope and a once-time cow puncher," said Willard. Since I won the championship I find that I was many things and did many things that I haven't the slightest recollection about.

"My name is Jess Willard and it always has been Jess Willard! No one questioned it until I became champion. Since then I am informed that my name isn't Jess Willard; that my name is something entirely different.

"It seems, from what I see in the papers, that a long, long time ago I punched the daylights out of a fellow and skipped town. After I fled from the borders of that town I shook off my old name and took the name of Willard. The fact that Willard is just an adopted name is very interesting news to me.

"I learn also from the public prints, that I once aspired to be a policeman. In fact, it seems that I aspired a half dozen different times. Nearly every paper I pick up these days tell how I once tried to become a policeman. Most of the papers mention different towns where I was to become an officer of the law. From what I gather from these accounts I must have spent about a year moving from town to town trying to get a job on the police force.

"Also I have noticed that about sixteen different men 'discovered me.' The fact is that no one really discovered me. I discovered myself. No one thought of me as a possible aspirant for the heavyweight championship of the world until I thought about it myself. Then I announced my ambition.

"Right up to the moment that I knocked out Jack Johnson nearly everyone took me as a joke. They couldn't see me with a pair of field glasses and they weren't a bit backward in telling me so. But how different it is now. Nearly everyone I meet tells me that he was absolutely confident that I would win—that I am the greatest fighter of all time. All of that amuses me, because I know human nature a little bit anyway.

"Since becoming champion I am informed that I am six years older than I really am. My age is 27, according to my own figures, but a lot of fellows insist that I am 33. They ramble about some tombstone inscription which is supposed to be conclusive proof that I am 33.

"To be the heavyweight champion of the world is an honor. It means much to me—the fulfillment of a great ambition. But just the same, being champion has its drawbacks. I love a quiet life, but I am a bit afraid that I can't withdraw to a private life—for a while at least.

"I had to go through much to reach the crest of the pugilistic world. I had to suffer a lot and stand for a lot. I am told that no man that ever reached the championship had to stand as much joking as I have. But what has been said about me in the past hasn't hurt my feelings. It hasn't left any bitterness. And it didn't turn me back from the long trail that I took to reach the top."

ESKIMOS SET EXAMPLE.

Family Drinking Cup Now Unpopular at Point Barrow.

The United States Public Health Service, which has maintained a sanitary service in Alaska for the past three years, finds that the mortality from communicable diseases in Alaska is gradually falling. In the majority of the settlements the teacher is the only doctor, but medical officers of the public health service make frequent visits to the various communities and teach both to the natives and the whites the methods by which tuberculosis, eye diseases, and other common ailments are spread, and the way in which they may be prevented. This warfare against disease has resulted in the abolition of the deadly roller towel and the common drinking cup by the natives in general, and this hygienic reform has spread even as far as Point Barrow, the most northerly point in North America.

To those interested in public health activities, it is of great interest to note the progress made in promoting hygiene and sanitation during recent years throughout the civilized world. In this respect our wards in Alaska, the Indians and Eskimos, have not been neglected. The U. S. Bureau of Education, which has supervision of the native schools of Alaska, is cognizant of the urgent need of sanitation in the native homes and villages in order to check and eradicate the communicable diseases, the effects of which have decreased the native population 14 per cent during the period 1900 to 1910, according to the U. S. Bureau of Census.

A part of the appropriation for education of the natives of Alaska is being expended for the maintenance of three improvised hospitals. All schools are provided with simple remedies and a medical handbook of instructions. Lectures on tuberculosis, eye disease, ventilation, care of infants, preparation of food, and other subjects pertaining to disease preventive measures are delivered. These talks are supplemented by individual instuctions in the home. Pamphlets on the cause, prevention, and cure of tuberculosis have been issued to pupils throughout the school service, and "How to Keep Well" cards placed in the homes. Various bulletins issued by the U. S. Public Health Service on health subjects have been distributed to the field workers for their information and guidance. Paper towels and individual drinking cups are being used in the schools in place of the common articles and their value explained to the children.

This campaign of warfare against disease is showing results. The natives are being educated to hygienic living, care being taken not to inculcate the customs of the white man unless they will bring about a betterment of health and economic conditions. This has resulted in a general improvement of the health of the natives of Alaska, and already the morbidity and mortality rates from the various disease have begun to fall. The natives have co-operated heartily in this work. It is interesting to think what results would follow a similar co-operation on the part of the whites in the United States.

DISEASE OF TREES.

Trees of New York Suffering From Many Different Diseases.

To most people fungi are known only by their occasional fruiting bodies such as mushrooms, toad stools, puff balls, etc. The growing part of the fungus is active night and day just as long as the temperature and moisture conditions are favorable. There are several thousand different kinds of fungi to be found in the state of New York and several hundred of them are very common on our trees. Many of the mushroom types are edible but some of them are very poisonous. The greatest interest and value of the study of mushrooms and fungi in the state does not lie in their edible or poisonous qualities but in the way in which they take part in the life of the forest.

A great many fungi are active agents in the change of vegetable debris into what is commonly called mold or humis. Humis enriches the soil and makes it very productive and it also acts like a sponge in the forest for the holding of water which falls as rain or which comes from melting snow. Millions of feet of valuable timber in New York are annually destroyed or rendered useless by fungi. Many other fungi are active parasites upon living trees causing eventual death in most cases. Much of the diseases and decay in shade or ornamental trees is due directly or indirectly to fungi.

Some of the fungi of New York state are found in nearly all parts of the world. Others are found only in the temperate regions, while still others do not occur outside of certain limited sections of the state.

The department of forest botany of the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse is making an extensive study of the forest fungi of the state. During 1914 large collections of fungi were made in the Adirondacks and Catskills as well as in the vicinity of Syracuse. It is planned to continue during the coming season the study of forest fungi already begun by the college and at the same time to investigate carefully the several problems involving the relation of fungi to disease and decay in trees.

Black Knot on Trees.

Frequent inquiries are coming to the college of forestry concerning black knot which develops upon the twigs and branches of several of our common trees such as oak, maple and hickory. These black knots give an unsightly appearance to the trees and often cause death to the branches. As a matter of fact, very little is known as to the cause of these knots although probably insects have something to do with their formation. They are not caused by fungi as in the case of many such knots or burls in the pine trees. Neither are they like the common black knot of cherry and plum wrich is caused by a parasitic fungus. The department of forest botany in the college of forestry at Syracuse is making an investigation of these knots or tree tumors. The object of the investigation is to determine the distribution of the trouble, the kinds of trees that are affected, the loss or injury caused by them, and if possible, methods of prevention. The college will be glad to have specimens of black knots upon all kinds of trees and from different parts of the state. The young or beginning stages of the knot are necessary for the determination of the cause of the trouble. Once the cause is known, a means of controlling it may be determined.
